GOVERNOR LOSES HIS HAT

Delays Bridge Program Governor Edwards, of New Jersey, lost his hat just before the line of automobiles started from the Bellevue-Stratford this morning for the beginning of the bridge ceremonies.

EVERY ONE WAS READY TO GO, when the Governor of New Jersey was missed. He came strutting up, minus his hat, and smoking a cigarette. "I don't know where it is," he said, and a half dozen aides went scurrying to look for it, while some one suggested that his top-piece was in the ring.

"WELL, I'll go with a hat," said the Governor after fifteen minutes had gone in futile search. He made one more try—and found it in his room.

Griffiths, of Blavis street near Broad, was arraigned before Magistrate Dorn today.

Griffiths was accused by Nancy Kennedy, 1920 Brunner street, who said that he had come to her home and asked to inspect the gas meter and stove. After he had looked at them she said he grabbed her in his arms and squeezed her. She struggled away and ran to her mother.

Other women appeared at the hearing, including the girl's mother, Mrs. Mary Kennedy, who identified Griffiths as the man who had come to her home, with the excuse of being the gas man, a piano tuner, electrical contractor or some other pretext, but who possessed more ability at making love to first sight than at inspecting gas stoves or tuning pianos.

DE VALERA QUILTS AS PRESIDENT OF IRISH REPUBLIC

Withdraws Resignation, However, on Agreement to Take Treaty Vote Tomorrow Dail Irrevocably Split on Question of Ratification of Peace Agreement GRIFFITH SCORES AGAIN Keeps Pact Before Parliament by Raising Point of Order

By the Associated Press. Dublin, Jan. 6.—Eamon de Valera resigned the presidency of the Irish republic today, presenting also in the Dail Eireann the resignation of the Cabinet. He told the Dail he would offer himself for re-election, standing on the principles of 1916.

Mr. de Valera said he must have a Cabinet which thought with him, and he would demand that all resources be given him to defend the republic. He said he had entered politics as a soldier—as one who had accepted the proclamation of the republic. He declared the men who drew up that proclamation had entered into the heart and soul of the country.

"We have proved that, thank God," he added. The opponents of the treaty applauded this statement. Mr. de Valera said he believed that only by combining the treaty and his alternative proposals could the country be kept together. If the treaty went through these surely would be rebels against the British government, he declared.

"Thank God," he exclaimed, "I'll never be a British citizen. I'll die first." Continuing, President de Valera said: "I propose to lay down my office, and the House must decide by constitutional means who is the chief executive."

He then offered the Dail his resignation, saying: "And with it goes the ministry." When President de Valera announced his resignation, Arthur Griffith objected that the matter before the Dail was a motion for the approval of the Anglo-Irish treaty.

Michael Collins said that if the Dail rejected the treaty Mr. de Valera could have his office in two minutes. Collins declared De Valera's substitute proposal was "red herring," adding: "We will have no Tammany Hall here." Mr. de Valera said he could not accept the responsibility unless he had the sole powers of the government to carry on his office.
